steamship agents, of Liverpool, were straigned in the Jefferson Market Court to-day and remanded until to-morrow. Keene is the son of an old sea captain who for many years commanded a ship attached to the African Steamship Company, of Liverpool, Young Keene was employed by the agents of the Company, of Liverpool, Young Keene was employed by the agents of the Company when he was fourteen years old, and remained with them up to a month ago.

After his arrest yesterday he confessed to Inspector McLaughlin that he had made collections for the steamship agents. He swas in receipt of a good salary, and with his wife and one child occupied a cosy cottage in Empress rew, Kenzington, England. He became acquainted with a number of young clubmen and indulged in baccarat. He lest heavily, he said, and began to steal from his employers to pay his gambling debts. Fearing detection, he decided to avail himself of the first opportunity to "make a haul" and escape. The chance came Jan. 10 when he made collections for the firm. A few days later he took passage with his wife on the Berlin for this city, intending to go to Rio Janeiro and engage in the coffee trade. He made no attempt to conceal his identity, having registered on the ship, and at the hotel under his own name. His arrest was made on a cable from the Head Constable of Liverpool, Detective Ready explained to Justice Taintor hat they had found $5.00 among Keene's effects. They had expected further advices from Liverpool, but none had arrived. Double Irish Damask Dinner Napkins
